TOBACCO, THE ENVIRONMENT, AND THE HEART

Tobacco use contributes to air pollution and can generate concentrations of particulate matter up to 10 TIMES HIGHER than a diesel car engine.

ENVIRONMENTAL TOBACCO SMOKE

Second-hand smoke contains toxic substances, such as ammonia, acetaldehyde, formaldehyde, nicotine, nitrosamines, and particulate matters.

Tobacco use contributes to air pollution and can generate concentrations of particulate matter up to 10 TIMES HIGHER than a diesel car engine.

Tobacco and Air Pollution

Air pollution causes approximately 7 million deaths annually, including more than 3 million as a result of heart disease.

For decades, the tobacco industry has sought to greenwash its reputation and portray itself as an environmentally-friendly industry.

For example, the tobacco industry has been involved in activities such as sponsorship of environmental causes and the promotion of ‘tobacco harm reduction’ products.

However, the cultivation of tobacco leaves involves...

Deformation is universally recognized as a major contributor to both air pollution and cardiovascular disease.

The annual production of 6 trillion cigarettes generates...
